CALIFORNIA STATE POLYTECHNIC COLLEGE

Volume XXXIII No. 97

San Luis Obispo, California

Thursday, March 11, 1971

Kathy Reid, Gail Irvin and Mary Gaularte practice doll like antics and funny faces for their imitation of rag dolls. Their dance will be one of dances performed at the annual Modern Dance Concert, Friday night.

Girl's feet suite

"Communication in Dance" has been chosen as the theme of the 1971 Modern Dance Concert to be performed Friday, March 12, in the College Theater. The concert is scheduled for 8 p.m. and is open to the public as well as members of the campus community.

Gregorian Chant, jazz, oriental fan dance, ballet, folk dances, and contemporary dance with "electronic music" will be performed by more than 70 dancers under the direction for Mrs. Moon Ja Minn Suhr, a native of Korea.

"Dance is communication and we would like to communicate further with the community by inviting some local school dance groups to this concert," stated

Mrs. Suhr. Besides students from this college, there will also be Cuesta College, San Luis Obispo High School, and Los Ranchos Elementary School students dancing.

Even with the burden of finals and late night rehearsals, the students are putting together a professional show. The annual concert presented by the Women's Physical Education Department will be Mrs. Suhr's second. Talent, practice, and patience will go towards making the concert better than last year's, undisputed success.

Advance tickets may be bought at the College Union on campus and at Brown's and Premier Music Stores, downtown.

Crossing co-ed hit in front of dorms

Daurice Critchley, a freshman History major from Napa, was admitted to Sierra Vista Hospital Tuesday night after being struck down as she crossed Grand Avenue in front of Yosemite dorms.

According to Highway Patrol officials, Miss Critchley was not in the crosswalk when a car driven by Anthony Barret, 19, of San Luis Obispo, ran into her. Barret is not being held.

The 10:30 p.m. accident sent Miss Critchley to the hospital with concussions, cuts and a broken leg. Her condition was listed by hospital spokesmen Wednesday afternoon as "good."

The area where Miss Critchley was struck, in front of Yosemite dorms, has been under recent criticism for having insufficient lighting, although campus officials note that additional lights were installed last summer.

Planning commission's Contest for all speakers

turn to make a stand

The City Council agreed Monday to ask the Planning Commission to push ahead with development of a plan for preservation of San Luis Obispo's creeks.

Present at the meeting were members of this college's 360-X Awareness of Issues class. These students feel that they have done as much as any private groups could do by spending the Winter Quarter and over 1,600 man-hours in making an inch-by-4-inch survey.

Warner Chabot, of this college, told the city council, "I hope we undertake a program to save our creeks before it's too late." He argued for the immediate formulation of policy to govern creek preservation and to warn developers of what limitations may occur on newly purchased land.

Richard Krejsa, faculty member, said he hoped the council would follow up on the student's proposal; even if a class like 360-X was not offered to "lend" support to the ecological movement. The Sierra Club and the California Native Plant Society also supported the motion; at least their members present did.

After more discussion, the possibility of depleted topic began to become evident. Tim Beedle, another student, called to the attention of the council that action on the behalf of the planning commission should be taken. The motion was passed and a quarter's worth of work wasn't left hanging high, dry and up the creek.

What's wanted

Sigma Delta Chi, National Journalistic Society has something that is neither dangerous, humorous, political, sexual or fattening. Yet all students want and need it. How about you? Visit an SDX member on campus or go to GA 128, today.

The third annual Mustang Invitational Speech Tournament will be held at this school on March 19-20. The tournament is under the guidance of James Conway, director of forensics, and a member of the Speech Department.

There will be four individual events plus a debate (which includes from 2-4 persons per team). The individual events include: 1) "after dinner speaking," whose purpose is to entertain, but a serious underlying purpose may also exist; 2) "oral interpretation," which is the reading of any type of literature, excluding cuttings from plays or speeches, in order to bring that literature to life; 3) "persuasive speaking," which is a speech dealing in a topic of national or international importance; and 4) "impromptu speaking," which is a speech that is prepared immediately after reading an editorial. The contestant will be given seven minutes to read the editorial and compose a speech on the subject of that editorial.

The next event will be for the debate squads. They will speak on the proposition: "that the Federal Government should adopt a program of compulsory wage and price controls." The squads will debate under the traditional Oxford format. That is, "four, ten minute constructive speeches and four, five minute rebuttals.

Individual events will be split into divisions; upper, lower and novice. The novice division is for students who have less than one year of collegiate experience and who are appraised as beginners. The lower division is for freshmen and sophomores who have less than two years of collegiate experience and juniors and seniors with less than one year of collegiate experience. And the upper division is open to all undergraduates, regardless of experience, and graduate students with no collegiate experience at all.

Awards for the tournament will include a sweepstakes trophy which is presented to the school with the best overall record. The sweepstakes trophy will, eventually, go permanently to any team that wins it for two consecutive years. Also, permanent trophies will be awarded to the first and second place debate teams in each division.

First and second place trophies will also be awarded in each individual event and certificates for superior and excellent performance, based on preliminary round competition, will also be given out. A best debater trophy will be presented to the outstanding student debater in each division, based on preliminary rounds of competition.

Conway pointed out that the Mustang Invitational Tournament is one week prior to two major tournaments, The State Junior College Championships and the National Debate Tournament. He added that our tournament may be well attended because it would provide "a final testing ground for speeches and debate cases that are to be used in these tournaments."

Scarab projects

Scarab, the campus chapter of the National Architectural Honorary Society has chosen several campus service projects to be initiated this year. Some of their achievements can already be seen in the Architectural Gallery in the Engineering West building.

Future plans include a foot-bridge on Brimolara Creek for access to the aero hanger parking lot, landscaping of the Engineering East building patio, design and construction of a display area in the Cafeteria for posters and announcements, and design and construction of the Chris Jespersen School sandbox play structure in conjunction with Circle K, according to Dennis Luz, historian.

Scarab's past achievements were community service projects.

Planners praise students

For the students of C-lab it was just a refresher, but for the City of Morro Bay five different plans for the end of Morro Bay Boulevard, presented to the planning commission by the students, may be the vision needed to develop their Embarcadero.

These plans are a product of the fourth-year architecture design class taught by Andrew Merriam. According to Merriam, the class was divided into teams which sought individual approaches to providing a pedestrian walk-way down a bluff that separates the stores of the upper level of town from the fishing and tourist areas of the Embarcadero.

The focal point for the project is a large granite sculpture by Wachtung Korishell, now in progress, that will be located at the top of the bluff. It will be visible from above and below.

"We want to have a space where there are lots of things happening—not just a transition," says Judy Reineck, one of the students.

One plan uses a large amount of rock so "people can relate to Morro Rock instead of feeling that they are walking to something man-made," says Hugh Wibell of the three member team.

Other teams chose to rely upon used wood from old pilings, railroad ties, and demolished buildings. "We want to maintain what we think are the best characteristics of existing structures and set the theme for future development," explains Stew Voeltz, co-worker on a plan that uses large platforms to draw people up from the Embarcadero.

Another plan employs cement ramps and platforms, "to keep costs down", and encourage the greatest number of people to use the area—"women with babies in strollers, small children who have trouble with stairs, and the man in the wheelchair," say Bob Verner and John Suria of this three-man team.

The assignment took five days of class time plus the weekend. According to Merriam, it was an easy job for his class. "It was a refresher for the students and something they could enjoy," he says. The plans brought praise for their imagination and practicality.

The project was first suggested by a member of the Morro Bay Planning Commission to serve as a catalyst for this type of badly needed development. The real usefulness of the project will not be known until more concrete plans, by the planning commission, have been made in the near future.

Novel soil view topic of course

A course aimed at introducing all students to the properties of soil, will be offered for the first time in the Spring Quarter under the title of General Soils.

The course will be centered on the general make-up of soil and how it relates to man, according to Dr. C. D. Piper, head of Soil Sciences. It will also look at the problems involved with the development of soil and how it can best be used for production.

The class has been catalogued before as SS 230, but until this quarter it has been taught primarily for Social Science majors.

Piper says the course is relevant today, for ecological reasons, and will be useful in clearing up some of the misconceptions about soil pollution.

New physics class to pry into new dilemma

The Physics Department will offer Physics 204, Introduction to modern physics, during the spring quarter.

Taking place in an informal atmosphere, the class will deal with subjects more relevant to today, as compared with the usual "dead classics" of Physics classes, according to Dr. Ralph A. Peters of the Physics Department.

The class is open to all non-physics majors, with the prerequisite of either Physics 121, or consent of the instructor, Mr. Aernat James. It is essentially a descriptive course with 3 units of credit and no laboratory work.

Physics 204 will deal exclusively with topics of Twentieth Century physics.

Physics 204 will help satisfy the general education physical science requirement.

Tales of horses

Thursday, March 11, at 7:30 p.m., is the date set for the showing of the film—"The Proud Breed." Starring Wayne Newton and being presented by the Cutting Reining Club, this hour-long movie about the Arabian horse will be shown in AE 121.

The movie is in color and admission is free of charge. Everyone is invited to come and watch this film, especially all the horse-lovers in the crowd.

Some of the scenes in the film were shot locally, at the Green Gate Arabian Horse Ranch, here in San Luis Obispo. The film has been shown both on television and in theaters.

The Cutting and Reining Club is sure that everybody will enjoy this movie.

Wrestlers seek title

A young wrestling team will try to capture its fourth straight NCAA College Division championship tomorrow and Saturday at Fargo, N.D.

Six sophomores, three seniors and one junior make up the team that has dominated the college scene for the past three years.

Though the Mustangs are favored to win the championship again, Vaughan Hitchcock feels that the grapplers must be at their best if they are to win. Strong competition is expected to come from Northern Colorado and Mankato State. Both schools have gone against the same strong competition that the Mustangs have and should benefit from it.

The first four place finishers in this meet move on to the University Division finals later this month at Auburn, Ala.

The Mustangs will use primarily the same team that opened the season against Navy. One noticeable loss is Steve Gardner. He was beaten by Lee Torres last week in challenge matches for the 142 position. Torres is moving down a weight class for the nationals.

Sophomore Gary McBride will be at the 118 position as he has been for most of the year. Hitchcock has said that McBride has been unheralded this past year but should gain national recognition this weekend. McBride has beaten several of the nations best wrestlers.

Glen Anderson will be at 126. Larry Morgan returns to the scene at 134 after a layoff. Allyn Cooke will represent the Mustangs at 150 while John Finch tries to become a four-time place finisher at 155.

Frank Oakes will wrestle at 167 and will be followed by Pat Farner at 177. Hitchcock has stated that Farner may be the surprise of the Mustang team. "Farner has improved tremendously," he said.

Gary Maloffi will move back up to 190 after going at 177 against Washington. Tim Kopitar completes the lineup at heavyweight.
